We Go Along With

Eisenhower — Not

Much Choice

BEHIND CLOSED doors yesterday General Dwight D. Eisenhower told the United States Senate some of his plans for the Atlantic Pact Nations' defense of Europe — from which he has just returned after a series of historic conferences.

News coming out of that senate meeting reports that the general plans on 40 divisions, about 700,000 troops, by the end of 1952. To which Eisenhower adds this cryptic comment:

"I don't deny the danger of a powder-keg war. But the task today is one of building for peace."

America will go along with Eisenhower — we haven't any choice but to go along. Certainly we won't permit Russia to get away with the old Hitlerite pattern of dividing the democratic countries and then gobbling them up one by one.

Best news Eisenhower brought back from Europe is that the Western nations will stand united, and will furnish the great majority of fighting men if America will produce most of the munitions. He made it clear that all partners under the Atlantic Pact will "make their maximum possible contribution."

This is a definite commitment from Europe, and being reported to us by our own Eisenhower we can depend on it.

With better news coming out of Korea these days, the Eisenhower European report is an additional fine morale-builder for the democratic side in the endless argument with Soviet Russia.

Search for 8 Escapees Continues

Little Rock, Feb. 2 (AP) — Officers manned roadblocks and roamed snow-clogged Arkansas highways today seeking eight potentially dangerous felons who fled the state hospital's criminal ward here.

The eight and four others escaped from the hospital for nervous diseases last night after assaulting four attendants. Eight sped away in a car belonging to one of the beaten attendants; the four others escaped on foot.

The latter four are back in custody. One, a mental patient, was retaken last night. The other three were captured here this morning in the house of an elderly couple, about one mile south of the hospital and about one mile west of state police headquarters.

The couple, Mr. and Mrs. U. R. Spahn and their 14-year-old granddaughter, Patricia Buell, were held hostage all night. They said their intruders bandaged razors, drank pot after pot of black coffee and took turns guarding them and napping.

Hope Negro Beaten and Robbed

Joe Vaughn, Hope negro, was cruelly beaten and robbed about 8 o'clock last night at Fred Scott's place on South Hazel and city police identified his attacker as Linus Berard, 59, an ex-convict from Lafayette, La.

The two were alone in the cafe at the time of the attack. A third man was in another room of the building but heard nothing until he returned and found Vaughn unconscious on the floor.

Vaughn was hit three times about the head with a sharp-edged "Blacksmith's Hammer." He is in critical condition in a local hospital and there is little hope he will recover.

Police were summoned and discovered Vaughn's pockets had been looted. After taking the injured man to the hospital a systematic search started. Officers discovered that a negro man had hired a taxi to take him to Texarkana.

Clyde Mosier of the city force and State Patrolman Guy Downing followed, overtook the cab near the weigh station at Fulton, arrested Berard, returning him to Hope.

The money taken from Vaughn's wallet amounted to over $100. It was found in Berard's possession. At the local station the assailant readily admitted everything. Officers said, including serving time in the Louisiana state prison on a sentence for simple burglary.

The ex-convict had been in Hope for a couple of days and had been to Scott's place, frequently. Officers said he admitted knowing Vaughn had a "big roll" but claimed he didn't intend to rob him.

Berard had left the building and found the weapon, he told officers, just outside. It was then he decided to rob him, he told police.

He is charged with robbery.

Many Merchants to Close Early on Saturday

A majority of the merchants of Hope have decided to close their businesses at 6 p. m. Saturday, the Chamber of Commerce announced today. This is due to the weather conditions. J. I. Liebong, manager announced.

4 Below Zero Is Coldest Here in 21 Years

Although sunshine bore down here today this section had little to be happy about in the way of weather — last night's temperature of 4 degrees below zero was the coldest in 21 years.

At 8 a. m. today the mercury was 1 above zero and the sun was blazing down. A slight thaw had started shortly after noon but it will take much more of the same to clear this area of its 3-inch coating. Back in 1930, January 18, the mercury went to 8 below. The coldest since then was 1 above in 1940. The temperature tonight is stated to be a few degrees warmer and some relief is promised during the weekend.

By The Associated Press

Midwinter's longest and most severe weather dealt more damaging blows across wide areas of the country today.

But there appeared some hope that the worst of the nearly week-long spell of ice, snow and sleet and biting cold was nearing an end.

The frigid air also renewed its attack on the cold-plagued midwest but there was a promise of some warming.

Temperatures dropped to 35 below zero in Lone Rock, Wis., today. The below zero line extended all the way to Fayetteville, Ark., where it was -14 early today.

The cold struck northern and central Florida, with some below freezing readings.

Floods threatened area in Tennessee and Kentucky. Some 3,000 were made homeless in southeastern Kentucky, where the Cumberland and Kentucky rivers overflowed.

A slight break in the weather is forecast today after four straight days of a nationwide cold siege. But the expected tapering has come too late to prevent 151 deaths as the result of snow, sleet, freezing rain and cold and crop losses in the millions.

County Polio Campaign Ends Short of Quota

Hempstead county's March of Dimes drive officially ended last night with a total of $2428.15 turned in on a goal of $5,000. Campaign director Eddie Holland said today that this represented all collections except the schools, sports events, rural community contributions, theatre collections, and coin collectors. It is hoped when all these are turned in the March of Dimes drive will be closer to its goal.

Although the drive is officially over, anyone who has not turned in contributions, may still mail it to March of Dimes, Box 417 Hope, Arkansas.

Texas Hard Hit, Valley Crops a Total Loss

In Texas, one of the hardest-hit of the southern states, the lower Rio Grande valley has given up this year's citrus and vegetable crops as completely lost. A vast area south of Houston and San Antonio still is locked in the grip of ice which has knocked out telephone and Western Union communications.

Youth Draft Splits Ranks of Educators

Washington, Feb. 2 (AP) — The ranks of education are split over the proposed drafting of 18-year-olds.

The Association of American Colleges, which supports the defense department's draft-the-18-year-olds proposal, said today it cannot recognize the National Education Association (NEA) as a spokesman for colleges and universities.

Ralph McDonald, executive secretary of NEA's department of higher education, testified before the senate armed services committee Jan. 24 in opposition to the draft proposal.

Dr. Guy E. Snively, executive director of the Association of American Colleges, distributed to the press today copies of a letter to association members reminding them the association had rejected return of NEA's department of higher education to its Jan. 8, 1951, annual meeting.

Snively said his association is composed of the liberal arts colleges of the nation and is qualified to speak for higher education along with the American Association of Universities the American Council on Education, and the American Association of University Professors.

By contrast, Snively said, the NEA is composed of individual members of the educational profession, with no distinction between administrative and other personnel and no institutional membership.

"NEA therefore cannot represent the views and interests of the institutions from which it draws its membership," Snively said.

Bill Up to Halt Forestry Activities

By HARLEY PERSHING

Little Rock, Feb. 2 (AP) — A bill to prevent the state forestry department from operating in four counties was introduced in the Arkansas senate today.

The measure (SB23) was introduced by Sen. Eagle Street of Cave City. Street charged that the forestry department, without authority, had prevented farmers from burning off their land in Sharp, Randolph, Baxter and Fulton counties.

Street said there is no law authorizing forest department officials to dictate to farmers in those counties. His law proposes to stop that practice.

Today was house day in the senate. Numerous bills which have been approved in the lower chamber were approved and sent to the governor for the signature. Most of the measures affected only certain areas.

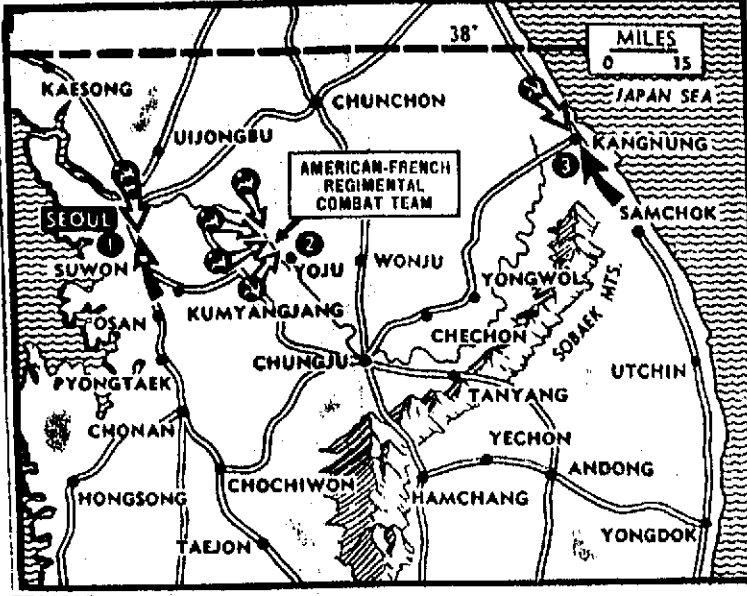

The senate was to adjourn later today until Monday at 2 p. m.

El Dorado Man to Attend Oil Meeting

Austin, Tex., Feb. 2 (AP) — The interstate oil compact commission's 1951 budget will be planned by the group's executive committee here Feb. 10.

Plans for their meeting April 28-29 at Santa Fe, N. M., extension of the compact in congress, and appointment of 1951 committees also will be discussed.

Gov. Allan Shivers, commission chairman, said Gov. Johnston Murray of Oklahoma had sent word he will attend, others expected are O. C. Bagley, El Dorado, Ark., and Clarence T. Smith, Flora, Ill.

SOME GAINS MADE ON KOREAN FRONT — United States troops below Seoul punched out new gains up to three miles as reports indicated large groups of Chinese Communist troops were in retreat back across the Han River just below the city. At Yonju (2) on the right flank of the 50-mile western front, thousands of Red soldiers moved down on U. S. and French soldiers, threatening complete encirclement of the Allied force. U. S. Offers Japs Part in Defense

By The Associated Press

The United States government has offered the government of conquered Japan a defense agreement.

The offer was transmitted by roving ambassador John Foster Dulles, Republican adviser to the state department.

Dulles, who now is in Tokyo, told a meeting of the America-Japan Society that Japan, back by American might, would be a powerful "collective protection" against aggression — after a peace treaty is signed.

Dulles said that if Japan accepts the offer, the United States will consider keeping military forces in and near Japan "as testimony to unity" between the two countries.

40 Divisions Is Aim of Eisenhower

Washington, Feb. 2 (AP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower reportedly told senators today he is aiming at a goal of 40 divisions — roughly about 700,000 troops — to defend Western Europe by the end of 1952.

Testifying behind closed doors, Eisenhower also declared:

"I don't deny the danger of a powder keg war. But the task today is one of building for peace."

The direct quotation was attributed to Eisenhower by Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) of the senate foreign relations committee.

Connally said in a statement: The general expressed the view that the United States contribution under its North Atlantic obligations should be flexible and that it should not be expressed in terms Continued on Page Two

Switchmen's Strike Brings Mail Embargo

By The Associated Press

The effects of the railroad switchmen's strike are being felt today in almost every section of the country.

More and more rail yard workers are calling in sick. The strike has spread to 42 railroads, and freight yards in 40 cities are tied up in knots. Mail, freight and express continue to pile up — and war goods and combat rations destined for Korea.

The government is taking new steps to end the walkout. A Federal Court hearing is scheduled in Chicago this afternoon in a contempt of court case against the rail union.

And President Truman is said to be doing everything possible to get the strikers back to work.

Despite these efforts, the sick call walkout continues to grow. Commuter traffic has been drastically curtailed in and out of New York city. And multilane streamliners are running late or not at all.

A postoffice mail embargo is in effect in ten major cities.

The government clamped a partial embargo on mail Thursday because of the railroad strike. It also made two legal moves to try to halt the walkout.

Paralysis spread along more of the nation's rail arteries as more trainmen reported "sick." The rail strike also caused layoffs of more than 60,000 workers in other industries.

Hardship loomed on the fight and home fronts. Combat rations for the forces in Korea were stalled in Chicago's vast freight yards. Domestic mail, freight and express piles mounted.

The tieup of fuel oil shipments brought fears that homes would grow cold during the current cold wave gripping much of the nation.

The mail embargo, similar to the declared during the pre-Christmas walkout by the trainmen, directly affected 10 of the nation's largest cities.

The order restricted acceptance of second, third and fourth class mail for out-of-town delivery at Chicago, St. Louis, Washington, Philadelphia, Trenton, N. J., Jacksonville, Fla., New York City, Atlanta Ga., Cleveland, and Baltimore, Md.

Still accepted are first class mail weighing less than eight ounces, daily newspapers, and emergency package mailings of medicines, drugs and surgical supplies.

Air mail service is not affected by the order.

Two congressmen urged President Truman to intervene in the strike. Sen. Holland (D-Fla.) asked the President to make a radio appeal, a move which was instrumental in ending the December walkout. Holland said the White House assured him over the telephone that the President was doing everything possible to end the strike.

Rep. Van Pelt (R-Wis.) also telegraphed the President to act in the strike.

In the three days since they began, the "sick" walkouts of rail workers have spread to more than 42 railroads in about 30 cities.

Switchmen have been demanding a 40 hour week at the pay they receive for a 48 hour week. They struck for three days in December, but went back to work Dec. 16.

8th Kiwanis Minstrel Being Readied

Director Emmett Thompson started rehearsals last night at the Youth Center on the Eighth Edition of the annual Kiwanis Minstrels presented by the local Kiwanis club of which Teddy M. Jones is president.

Net profits of each minstrel are donated toward the operations expenses of the Hope Youth Center. Minstrel has announced that of which Mrs. Alva Remerson and George Frazier are active directors. Preceding years financial results have been very promising in that an amount of between $7,000 and $8,000 has already been placed toward expenses of this worthy and worthwhile center.

Those present at last night's rehearsal believe that this year's minstrels will be just as good as any of the previous shows — if not perhaps better. Tickets may be had from any of the members and at down town locations to be announced. It is wise to get your tickets as early as this two night show is always a sell out.

The dates are Feb. 15th and 16th, nights only at the High school auditorium. The crazy antics of Kilowatt, Catfish, Perpetual, Atomic, Axle Grease and Epitaph will be held in restraint as far as possible by Mr. Leleucator — our own talented Mayor Lytle Brown. And men listed above will be played by Kiwanians Lawrence Marlin, Moody, Willie, Frank Horton, Eddie, William, Jimmie Miller and Gus Grier.

Truman Asks $10 Billion, More Later

Washington, Feb. 2 (AP) — President Truman today asked congress for a quick $10,000,000,000 tax increase and said he will ask still another increase later.

In a message to the legislators, Mr. Truman set out this program for raising the $10,000,000,000:

1. A $4,000,000,000 increase in individual income taxes already scheduled to yield a record $22,000,000,000 in the fiscal year starting July 1.

2. $9,000,000,000 increase in corporation income taxes. These with excess profits taxes included are scheduled to hit a record $2,000,000,000 next year.

3. A $3,000,000,000 increase in excise (sales) taxes — to be "concentrated upon less essential consumer goods." These taxes are estimated to yield $3,222,000,000 next year, under present tax laws.

The schedule outlined would mean a total tax take of $34,222,000,000. This is nearly a third more than the record collections of World War Two when the take reached $43,000,000,000 in 1945.

The understanding among congress members is that the further increase Mr. Truman is to request later would raise government revenues to more than $71,000,000,000. The President left details of how the proposed $10,000,000,000 increase is to be made for explanation by Secretary of the Treasury Snyder.

Snyder will go into this at public hearings to be opened Monday by the tax-writing house ways and means committee.

Mr. Truman did give one detail. He said the present $400 exemption should be retained.

Word is in vogue that normal corporate income tax rates be raised to 55 per cent from the present 47 per cent top.

The President did not say any rate increase today.

By The Associated Press

President Truman will send a message to congress today asking for the greatest tax increase the nation has had in order to pay for the arming of the United States and other free nations. The President has said that the government must tax "all it hurts. His message is expected to ask a tax that will hurt — a billion bill to bring in about ten billion dollars. Immediately and a six and a half million dollar bill later. If this is approved by congress it would raise the government's annual tax income to better than 71 billion dollars — far above the record world war two collection of 43 billion dollars in 1945.

Even before the presentation of president Truman's tax message there were demands on Capitol Hill for a reduction in non-defense spending. And some Republicans charged that the president's budget is padded to include the major part of the so called fair deal program under the heading of defense projects.

The nation's wage-price freeze has been relaxed somewhat, but officials still are wrestling with the complicated problem of working out a general overall formula to govern the future easing of controls. The first break in the across-the-board price freeze came late yesterday when the office of price stabilization announced that all strictly military items will be exempt from price ceilings.

The agency also announced the approval of an increase up to 50 cents a ton in the price of coal. The agency explained that the coal price boost was made to compensate for the pay raise for miners which became effective yesterday.

The chairman of the senate banking committee, Burnet Maybank of South Carolina, has announced that he is determined to strip all non-defense items from the administration's three-billion-dollar defense housing bill. The measure is intended to assure adequate housing for workers and service personnel in areas near defense plants and military installations. The Banking committee is scheduled to hear testimony on that bill at 11 a. m. (EST).

By The Associated Press

A few hours, congress will get a message from the White House asking for a record-smashing boost in taxes.

It will be signed by President Truman, who has said the government will have to tax the people "all it hurts."

Mr. Truman wants 10 and a half billion dollars more in taxes. That would result in an all-time record budget of 71 billion dollars — reflecting the cost of arming America and other free nations against the Reds. This country never has seen anything like it before. The height of World War II in the direct tax collection in the war was 43 billion dollars.

Income taxes will be raised by a total of $4 billion, and a new tax on corporate profits will be added.

UN Offensive Moves Within 8 Miles of Seoul

Tokyo, Saturday, Feb. 2 (AP) — United Nations tanks and artillery smashed within eight miles of Seoul Friday. To the north they routed the Chinese Communists from the east anchor of the defense line.

The drive on Seoul captured Yang, nine miles to the south, brought the South Korean army within artillery range.

Forty miles east, a United Nations force routed 8,000 Reds in a bloody 13-hour battle around Shon, 10 miles north of Yang.

Allied officers said the United Nations attack was moving rapidly forward all along the 40-mile front, backed by a shattering around-the-clock British and American artillery barrage.

Chinese Communist troops, tempted to counter-attack, were covered of fog seven miles north of Suwon, but were beaten off with heavy losses in the first attempt.

The fog lifted, revealing the Chinese and "everybody got into it" in blasting them — machine guns, tanks, artillery and rocket firing planes.

Late Friday two more Red panthers attacked the Korea peninsula and the battle was reported going on early Saturday.

An armored tank force last night from Anyang at dawn and slowly north toward Seoul, deeply entrenched Reds.

Word Seoul was not yet in arms fire from Red groups withdrew north after firing a few shots at the tanks before down upon them.

Officers said uniforms worn by them indicated that the Chinese capital contained both Chinese and North Korean soldiers of 4,000 men, smashed a Communist encirclement attempt and the help of reinforcements from the shattered Red force north.

Troops fled under shelling attack after a 49-hour battle, leaving 1,000 bodies by the field. Casualties estimated total casualties in the short at 3,600.

The Red retreat left the command of the city. North sent 10 miles north of Seoul about 37 miles past of Seoul.

The area is on the left of the Chinese line, protecting while the United Nations north from Anyang is on the flank.

Blinchon is a critical area to us and to the enemy. The Corps spokesman said: "It is the importance attached to the strength he threw into it. We have won an important point."

The U. N. advance was pushed by a shattering attack. American and British artillery barrage. Swarms joined in blasting the Reds.

Allies May Halt at 38th Parallel

By The Associated Press
United Nations troops now are less than 40 miles from the 38th Parallel and the allied forces are rolling ahead steadily against dwindling enemy resistance. The UN offensive renewed its momentum after smashing a red trap in Central Korea last night. Allied reinforcements and low flying planes broke the trap in which a mixed regiment of French and American troops was surrounded by six thousand reds. The fighting, some of it hand-to-hand, lasted 12 hours before the reds took to their heels. The defeated enemy force, incidentally was the largest since the UN withdrawal into South Korea.

The 38th Parallel may figure again soon as a key issue in the military future of Korea. There has been speculation as to whether UN troops will re-cross the artificial boundary when and if they regain enough lost ground. We have an unconfirmed answer to this question this morning from Washington and the answer would appear to be—no. High Pentagon officials are said to have decided we must stop short of the parallel. This, presumably, to ease the way to negotiations for a political settlement of the Korean War.

At eight army headquarters in Korea, a spokesman said that there would be neither confirmation nor denial of a Washington statement that UN forces had been ordered to halt at the 38th Parallel. He commented: "We have not gone into the business of divulging our intentions to the enemy."

Washington, Feb. 2.—(AP)—High officials are reported to have decided that United Nations troops should stop at the 38th parallel if they are able to drive that far in any northward advance in Korea.

While responsible authorities were reluctant to discuss this development even privately, the intent appeared to be to create, if possible, a basis for new efforts at a political settlement. The United States exercises through General Douglas MacArthur the command of United Nations forces in Korea and MacArthur presumably has been or shortly will be informed of the decision.

At the moment U. N. advances to the north are described as relatively limited patrol action and apparently the present strategy is not designed to develop an all-out northward movement. But if the Chinese and Korean Communist resistance proves relatively weak, an all out advance obviously might be undertaken and proceed, if possible, as far as the parallel.

Although the parallel, which formed the boundary between North and South Korea before the crossed by both U. N. and Communist forces, it is still regarded war began last June has been

DOROTHY DIX Children Come First

Dear Miss Dix: I am an executive 26 years old and have an associate of 21 who has become very dear to me. We have found love, peace, understanding, happiness and contentment together such as I, at least, did not know existed, for my marriage has been a failure from the first and has brought me nothing but misery. But I have children and my duty to them is obvious. Should I seek other employment? Should I make a clean break of our association? I do not consider myself, for I believe my children should come first and I want nothing but the best in life for this girl I love, regardless of how deep my pain may be in losing her. We both pray that we may settle this problem wisely. Won't you help us?

Quandary
Answer: There is no tragedy deeper and darker than of a fine and noble man married to a woman who finds the love he craves and the happiness he may not take in another woman. For there is no way out of it that is not filled with tears and suffering.

Case is Hopeless
And the case of the unhappily married man is particularly hard and hopeless when there are children whom he not only adores, but for whom he feels responsible. For the man who loves his children and has a strong sense of obligation to them there is no alternative but for him to stick to a marriage, no matter how unworthy his wife is nor how miserable she makes him, because if he gets a divorce he loses his children and loses all chance to influence them and form their characters. My advice to you would be to stand by them until they are grown. This is a bitter saying but there is no easy way out of your dilemma.

Nor is there any happy solution of your problem with the girl. Hers, too, is tragedy, for it means either stolen love or the frustration of love, both of which bring misery. Far better, it seems to me, a clean break between a married man and a girl whom he cannot marry rather than subjecting her to years of torture and weary waiting.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Speaking for myself and many other soldiers in the camp in which I am now serving, I would like to know your honest and sincere opinion of girls who write to us for a few weeks and then seem to forget us completely. A few hundred miles shouldn't make a difference in their sentimental feelings toward us. What's the matter with the girls?

Answer: Well, Soldier Boy, I expect the trouble is that most of the girls are not gifted letter writers, and after they have written you a few times and told you how much they miss you, and how lonesome they are, and how they are looking forward to your coming back they have written themselves out.

It isn't that they have forgotten you or are any less interested in you. It is just that it is an effort to write and they put it off, forgetting how anxious you are to hear from home. A good way to get them going would be to send them a list of queries. Say please tell me about so-and-so, this and that, and who's going with whom and all the other gossip you can think of. After all, that is the kind of letter that all of us like to get, because we can read what is happening in the world in the newspapers, but what we want to know is what is taking place in our home town.

Dear Miss Dix: I have two married children who have children. I have made a good job of raising my own children and they are all right, except for one thing. They resent advice as to how to feed their children, saying that I don't know anything about children's diet. Should I take all this abuse or should I talk back to them, reminding them of the many kind deeds I did for them when they were little?

A Disappointed Mother
Answer: I am afraid there is nothing you can do about it except let your children rear their children in their own way. That's the way you did your own, you know. Remember, you didn't take very kindly to your mother's advice on the subject.

Spinach Canneries Closed Senate Is Told

Little Rock, Feb. 2.—(AP)—A member of the Arkansas legislature disclosed today that the state board of health had closed all spinach canneries in northwest Arkansas.

Sen. John W. Cloer of Springdale who introduced a bill to alter board investigation methods, said the measure was a direct result of the "method in which these plants were placed under quarantine." Cloer said that board action was brought about by a strange bug that has attacked the spinach—described by canners as harmless. Cloer said the canners told him that the bug cannot be detected easily, nor washed off.

He said the canners charged that the health board representative closed some plants without visiting them, and closed others with only a perfunctory inspection of the product.

Cloer's bill would provide that health agents be required to present a specimen of foods in which they find defects to the producers.

"I don't know all the angles to this thing," said Cloer. "But when, and if we can get all these people board representatives and canners) together, we will learn more about the situation."

Han River Is Big Objective in Korea

By The Associated Press

The big objective of the Allied forces is the Han river, which guards the ancient battered capital of Seoul. Previous dispatches told of Allied patrols—small groups of soldiers—getting within firing range of the Han. Now we are told that UN troops in force are only ten miles from the river.

Forty miles to the north of the advancing Allied forces is the 38th parallel—that invisible line that once separated communist and free Korea.

Washington continues to speculate that the UN forces will stop when they get there. But if the field commanders have received the order yet, they refuse to talk about it.

Reports continue this morning that the ghastly threats of typhus have made its appearance among the North Korean troops—and that the Red Chinese are plagued by tuberculosis, trenchfoot, frost-bite.

Resistance is tapering off. But Allied commanders still won't say the Reds are beaten, or that the UN troops have cracked the enemy's main defenses.

On the Allied right flank, French and American doughboys have smashed their way out of a Communist trap. They had been attacked on three sides by thousands of screaming Reds north of Yaju, near the central sector. The French and Americans fought their way clear after 12 hours of savage close-quarter combat.

Right now the Allied strategy seems to be to take on a few Red outfits at a time, pinch them off from the main Red force and then annihilate them. In this manner, the Communist armies are being destroyed bit by bit.

As the UN troops move ahead, they are sweeping the hills and valleys clean of Reds, so none will be left behind to shoot them in the back.

The deep-throated roar of Allied artillery could be heard all night from one end of the 40-mile front to the other.

sent a specimen of foods in which they find defects to the producers. "I don't know all the angles to this thing," said Cloer. "But when, and if we can get all these people board representatives and canners) together, we will learn more about the situation."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler
Copyright, 1950
By King Features Syndicate.

New York, Feb. 1 — I have received a copy of a Dodge put out by Lee Kerdick, a manager of lectures, singers and miscellaneous trained seals, soliciting professional engagements for one Quentin Reynolds. Mr. Reynolds is described as a "world famous correspondent, author, editor." His topics include "the duties of citizenship." Mr. Reynolds has been hired to lecture at a dinner of the New York Credit and Financial Management association on Feb. 14. Leslie Gould, the financial writer of the New York Journal-American, who maintains a vigorous anti-Communist theme in his copy asked a friend who holds an executive position in this association how the association happened to select Mr. Reynolds.

"It was picked by a special committee from a list sent by a speaker's bureau," Mr. Gould reports. "While these men are in the business of checking out a morning and view with a jaundiced eye our financial standing, apparently they made no check as to Reynolds' associations." An officer of the association told Mr. Gould that no check was made beyond the blurb from the speaker's bureau. They wanted a non-controversial speaker who would be entertaining. He asked what they were paying Reynolds, and mentioned $1,000. The official said it was "half that." The association includes some of the biggest industrial companies in the United States.

As a public service, I provide herein information concerning Quentin Reynolds, which may be a guide to any organizations which may desire to hire him to instruct them in the duties of citizenship and other subjects in which he claims authority.

Mr. Reynolds appears to regard himself as a superior reporter. He disparaged the work of the American journalists who had been covering Moscow before he went there with the Harriett Beaverbrook mission. The purpose of this mission was to thrust on the Soviet dictators the riches of the United States, including, in the long run, vast amounts of stuff which was used to build up industrial Russia after the war.

Mr. Reynolds wrote that the longer he stayed in Russia the more he realized the "terrible misconceptions" held by the American and British people concerning the Soviet union. The reason for this, he wrote, was that for years these people had been receiving their information from salesmen, not from reporters. He said the "willing salesmen" were trying to sell us communism or make us hate it.

Father Leopold Braun, the American Catholic priest who was stationed in Moscow, has told me that this reflection on the integrity and ability of the journalists stationed in Moscow offended some of them deeply.

Bearing in mind this phase of things, we come at once to Reynolds' description of Father Braun as a "little Jesuit priest."

Father Braun told me he was five feet eleven and one-half inches tall. He is not a Jesuit but a member of the Assumptionist order. I shall offer as the conclusion of this story Father Braun's comments on the truthfulness, intelligence and accuracy of the remarks on religion which Mr. Reynolds offered as facts.

Reynolds said there was no "anti-religion" in Russia that he ever saw. He said Stalin just separated the church from the state, which, in his opinion, was "the same thing we did in our country in 1776." If he refers to the adoption of the constitution, with the bill of rights, whose first article forbids the establishment of a state religion, Mr. Reynolds is fifteen years out of line. The constitution, with the bill of rights, was finally ratified in 1791.

Mr. Reynolds said people did go to church in Russia. He had seen them. Then he said that if we had ever troubled to read the Soviet constitution we might get a true picture. He said he looked up this constitution. He "talked with" Father Braun, and he "mentally apologized" as a Catholic, "for the things which he had thought about Russia's attitude toward religion. He believed that the money and time spent on congressional investigations of Soviet propaganda in our country might better have been spent on investigations of anti-Soviet propaganda. This is exactly what the Communist traitors in the United States have been arguing for years. This is not the only time that Mr. Reynolds has lent such weight as he carries to the attack on the congressional anti-Communist inquiries.

Commenting on this particular phase of Reynolds' work, Father Braun said for publication: "The statement made by Quentin Reynolds is analogous to the one made by Lord Beaverbrook on his return to England after the negotiation of the first clauses of loan lease in conjunction with Averell Harriman. Beaverbrook flatly declared there was no religious persecution in Russia, which is a blind untruth and completely misleading. Mr. Reynolds apparently is under the impression that the only statement the Soviet government has made regarding religion is contained in article 124 of the constitution decreed Dec. 5, 1936, which article, Mr. Reynolds seems to forget, not only guarantees religious freedom but also guarantees freedom of anti-religious propaganda. This latter

Freeze Board Still Hasn't Clear Policy

By The Associated Press

More cracks and fissures are beginning to appear in the government's price and wage freeze structure. But not even the price and wage control authorities themselves seem to have a very clear idea of how their policy will shape up in the future.

They're still agreed that the rigid price and wage freeze will have to be relaxed. But they have not yet decided how to go about it.

As the first week of price and wage controls draw to a close, we find two more important exemptions:

Price controls have been lifted from military goods — such as secret weapons, uranium, radar, bomb sights, battleships, army trucks and brass buttons for the armed forces. These items are not generally in demand in civilian life, and their exemption from price controls should bring little hardship to the housewife.

Of more direct concern to many consumers are the price increases sanctioned yesterday for coal — up to 90 cents more a ton for anthracite, which is widely used for heating homes.

On the wage front, a cost-of-living increase of two cents an hour was approved for 12,000 workers in California plants of the North American Aviation Company. The wage board says this is not to be construed as general approval of cost-of-living increases as such. In this one case, the board apparently considered the fact that North American has large defense contracts.

Cyrus Ching's nine-man wage board is far from agreement on a general policy of permitting wage increases. However, those who usually make good guesses predict that the board will eventually come out with a formula permitting a pay boost of about ten per cent for workers who got no raise in 1950.

Here Currency

Greenstone ornaments used as currency by Polynesians derive their value from having been associated with dead heroes, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

freedom has been used by all the public appeal systems — press, radio, films and theatre — to turn religion to devotion from the voting of the constitution down to the very morning of the German invasion of the Soviet union. This occurred at 4:30 a. m., June 22, 1941. This repression diminished only after the Germans, as their armies advanced, opened up all the churches which the Russians had closed.

"Because of a lack of knowledge of the Russian language, Mr. Reynolds ignored the fact that the government publishing house bookshop right next door to the hotel where he spoke to me, had on sale and display Stalin's official pronouncement against God and religion of any kind.

"Seventy-eight legal articles of two special laws of 1918 and 1920, never abrogated and still enforced to this day, govern a tolerated semblance of religious freedom in Soviet Russia. Mr. Reynolds should have been troubled of reading the Soviet criminal code, especially that of the Russian socialist federation of Soviet republics, where one particular article practically renders null and void the proclaimed freedom of the constitution."

THE STORY: Lavinia Grenable, a woman of great beauty and a brilliant pianist, has been married for years to a man who is a complete failure. She is a woman of great beauty and a brilliant pianist, and she is a woman of great beauty and a brilliant pianist.

VI
While voices clamored from the house and footsteps hurried somewhere near, a lone, motionless figure stood silently in the doorway opening from Lavinia Grenable's den onto the terrace and forever afterward Lisa Farwell thought of that particular spot as the doorway to death.

The man moved then, and Lisa saw with another sense of shock that the man was Court Grenable. "Court, what happened?" she gasped.

"I... don't know," Court came out of the shadows, walking like a wooden man, stiffly, almost in a trance.

He didn't appear to recognize her or at least if he did it was unimportant at that moment. He walked slowly past her and Angus Kent, down the terrace and toward the darkening ravine where his mother had disappeared.

He stood there staring down in the pit of silence. There was something in his behavior that was more than strange, it was nearly sinister.

Lisa felt as if she were being drawn back from another world when she felt Angus put his hand on her arm. He turned her to face him and she saw that his

Lisa could see yet the lights of the searching party, the chief of police from Hilton and Dr. Hansen and Lavinia's son-in-law, Phillip Carson, as they came out through the underpass and probed the slimy floor of the ravine for the old woman.

Angus shook Lisa a little, not roughly, but urgently. "Stop that," he warned. He pushed open the door and led her into the house. Her father came through the study door.

"Come in," he said quietly. "Elizabeth phoned."

HENRY FARWELL shook hands with Angus, searching his face silently. What he found apparently satisfied him, for he turned and looked at her then and if his face had not been so strained with tension she would have thought he smiled.

It was Angus's strength, she thought suddenly, she had felt it and now her father sensed, too, a kind of inner solidity that would never fail the young man.

"I'll hear that scream if I live to be a hundred," he murmured. "It was awful. If I'd been alone..."

Angus's hand came over hers, for an instant she permitted it to stay there, and then remembering Court, she took her own away carefully.

With all the terrible happenings of the last hour there was still the undercurrent of her awareness of this Angus Kent. It was an awareness that gave her both elation and confusion.

She should be thinking only of Court now, she giving him the courage of her love. But she couldn't seem to reach him, couldn't get through the barrier she had felt between them in the old house where the shadows of night and death crept through the rooms, where police questions and hazy insinuations touched each member of the Grenable family.

Even in those first minutes of horror she had sensed the animosity between the children of Lavinia Grenable.

'Tennessee Waltz' Author on Lion Hour

Pee Wee King

Pee Wee King, Western band leader and composer of "The Tennessee Waltz" will appear on Lion Oil's "Sunday Down South" radio program as Don Estes' special guest on February 4th. The half-hour musical broadcast will be heard at 5 p. m. over the Lion network of stations and carried locally on KXAR.

In about 1935 Pee Wee King formed a musical aggregation called "The Golden West Cowboys" which was started on the Grand Ole Opry for more than ten years. In 1940 Redd Stewart joined Pee Wee and his boys and the team of King and Stewart has formed ... a team which was to write "The Tennessee Waltz" ... the song that may some day become Tennessee's official state song, and a song that has turned the musical spotlight of the nation on Tennessee.

The first recording of "The Tennessee Waltz" in the popular field was by Wayne King, several years ago. But it wasn't until the latter part of 1950 when the young singer, Patti Page recorded the song that it was whirled right to the top of the Hit Parade. Since then Pee Wee's waltz has been recorded by such outstanding musical personalities as Guy Lombardo, Sammy Kaye, Jo Stafford, Anita O'Day, Spike Jones, and about ten others.

All in all Pee Wee King has written about 300 songs. His first success, "Darling How Can You Forget So Soon" was recorded by Gene Autry. Another early success was a tune called "The End Of My Roundup Days" which Pee Wee wrote in memory of Tom Mix.

Just before "The Tennessee Waltz" broke into the top ten tunes of the nation — King had another tune there ... "Bonaparte's Retreat." Currently Pee Wee and his band are starred on WAVE-TV, Louisville, and they were the first band to be presented on television in the Blue Grass State. Pee Wee is an honorary member of the Kentucky Sheriffs' Association, an Honorary member of the Texas Marshals' Association, but his secret ambition is to be made a full Kentucky Colonel.

Highlight of "Sunday Down South" this coming Sunday will be the guest star appearance of Pee Wee King who he joins musical host Don Estes, songstress Dottie Dillard, comedy man "Lige" Beasley Smith with the Lion Oil Orchestra and Chorus for a full half-hour of musical varieties.

Liquor Trouble
Washington was the first President of the United States to have political troubles over whisky. The Whiskey Rebellion, in Pennsylvania's Monongahela valley, in 1794, was a protest against the imposition of excise taxes on liquor.

When a female mole is caught in a trap, the male's sorrow is often so great that he starves to death.

Lisa could see yet the lights of the searching party, the chief of police from Hilton and Dr. Hansen and Lavinia's son-in-law, Phillip Carson, as they came out through the underpass and probed the slimy floor of the ravine for the old woman.

Angus shook Lisa a little, not roughly, but urgently. "Stop that," he warned. He pushed open the door and led her into the house. Her father came through the study door.

"Come in," he said quietly. "Elizabeth phoned."

HENRY FARWELL shook hands with Angus, searching his face silently. What he found apparently satisfied him, for he turned and looked at her then and if his face had not been so strained with tension she would have thought he smiled.

It was Angus's strength, she thought suddenly, she had felt it and now her father sensed, too, a kind of inner solidity that would never fail the young man.

"I'll hear that scream if I live to be a hundred," he murmured. "It was awful. If I'd been alone..."

Angus's hand came over hers, for an instant she permitted it to stay there, and then remembering Court, she took her own away carefully.

With all the terrible happenings of the last hour there was still the undercurrent of her awareness of this Angus Kent. It was an awareness that gave her both elation and confusion.

She should be thinking only of Court now, she giving him the courage of her love. But she couldn't seem to reach him, couldn't get through the barrier she had felt between them in the old house where the shadows of night and death crept through the rooms, where police questions and hazy insinuations touched each member of the Grenable family.

Even in those first minutes of horror she had sensed the animosity between the children of Lavinia Grenable.
